Mr. Bryan and the Cabinet.

It is stated that Mr. Bryan's friends at democratic national headquarters deprecate The Star's suggestion of Mr. Bryan for Secretary of State. They think it would be better for him as a great party influence to remain in private life. Let him become a sort of unofficial adviser to the Wilson administration, offering his views about both executive matters and legislation, and throwing his full influence in favor of a redemption of the promises embodied in the Baltimore plat-
